Man killed in Kensington

A 59-year-old man was shot and killed in Philadelphia's Kensington section early Thursday.

The fatal shooting occurred just before 2 a.m. on the 2600 block of Jasper Street. Police arrived to find the victim with gunshot wounds to his head and back.

The victim was pronounced dead at the scene at 2:05 a.m.

Police did not immediately identify the victim Thursday morning. No motive has been identified, and police did not release any suspect descriptions. METRO

School board OKs doomsday budget

Cuts. Counseling, extracurriculars, sports and much more are on the cutting block.

The School District of Philadelphia could look a lot leaner next year.

The state commission that oversees the city schools — the five-member School Reform Commission — approved the district's $2.7 billion budget for the 2013-14 school year.

The controversial budget, which calls for drastic cutbacks, was passed with only one dissenting vote.

The so-called "doomsday budget," the brainchild of Superintendent William R. Hite Jr., was designed to circumvent a $304 million budget deficit.

The "doom" refers to proposed cuts, including the termination of extracurricular activities, counseling services, sports and more.

Earlier in the year, the district asked for $60 million from the city and $120 million from the state in additional funding. The district also requested about $133 million in union contract negotiations. Under the budget, classes would expand to 30 students in grades kindergarten through third, and to 33 students in grades 4 to 12.

In light of the cuts, Mayor Michael Nutter proposed two taxes to raise the needed funding. One of the two proposals — a $2 tax hike on cigarettes — was approved via city council committee on Wednesday. Nutter said it would help raise about $45 million for the district.

The second fundraising bill, which would increase the liquor-by-the-drink tax from 10 percent to 15 percent and would raise an estimated $22 million for the district, was not yet approved by the committee.

Both still require state Legislature's approval. The city also plans to raise $28 million with tougher delinquent real estate tax collections.

School Reform Commission chairman Pedro A. Ramos said he expects to amend the school budget in the future. The district can still amend the budget by the end of June if either of the funding avenues are approved.

In the public portion of the meeting, students recited rap lyrics, performed songs and urged the commission to reconsider such drastic cuts.

Nikki Adeli, a sophomore at Science Leadership Academy, asked how the commission expects a "21st century school to function without a secretary."

"Shameful"

Rally draws hundreds

Floating above a crowd of hundreds packed outside of the School District of Philadelphia headquarters and spilling out into North Broad Street, signs read: "You told us you were listening. You lied."

Students, teachers and parents rallied before the School Reform Commission was set to vote on the district's proposed "doomsday budget."

Sen. Mike Stack joined the fray, calling the proposed cuts "shameful," and told the crowd that the state-run SRC's time has "come and gone."

"It's time to return Philadelphia schools to local control and accountability," he said.

DHS steps up efforts for older foster youth

Outreach. May is National Foster Care Month, and DHS is trying to find homes for older youth.

Tysharea Moore, now 18, has been in foster care under the Philadelphia Department of Human Services since she was 10. Though she is currently placed with her biological mother, she for years drifted between group homes and hospitals.

"It made me homesick," Moore said. "It made me feel like I didn't have [anybody] there to help me. It just seemed like everybody left me with whatever stranger, and it felt like I didn't have anybody to turn to or talk to; there were so many new faces."

DHS is mounting an aggressive campaign to improve experiences for Moore and thousands of other foster children ages 14 and up, who comprise about half of the youth served and often go on to institutional care.

"We want to change that," DHS Commissioner Anne Marie Ambrose said Thursday. "I believe we have a moral imperative to actively look for foster homes that serve older youth. They deserve a family setting."

That's why DHS is now offering a rate increase of $300 per month to families who take in older foster children. "Most of the money will go directly to what the youth wants to do, things like prom, sneakers, school activities, trips — those types of things that are really important to adolescent development and normalizing the experience of kids who have been abused or neglected," Ambrose said.

In an additional attempt to raise awareness among potential foster parents, DHS on Thursday held a town hall meeting in Hunting Park, one of what Ambrose expects will be many.

Moore is a big supporter of the agency's efforts. "I think a lot of kids are going to be successful now," she said. "A lot of kids are not going to be in the streets doing violent things if they have positive things to do with themselves. I think it's very wonderful to help them know there's not just violence outside — there's also success out there."

Other efforts to place older foster children include:

- Hiring an older youth coordinator, a former foster child, to oversee outreach and activities
- Taking advantage of a new federal law allowing for subsidies for 18-year-olds who opt to stay in DHS care until they are 21
- Hiring a new coordinator to conduct expedited permanency meetings with all older youth to try to identify family members who can house them

Misconduct. Philly officer arrested one year after merit honor

Philadelphia police officer Jonathan Lazarde, 27, was arrested Thursday for allegedly offering to ensure acquittal for a man he arrested for firearms charges in exchange for a cash bribe.

The arrest came a little more than a year after Lazarde received a merit commendation from the department for excellent police work.

Jonathan Lazarde / PPD

Internal Affairs officials were tipped off to the alleged scheme last month and launched an investigation. They were able to confirm conversations between Lazarde and the defendant through phone and text message records, according to prosecutors. The defendant then agreed to cooperate with police and arranged a meeting with Lazarde, where he gave the officer $5,000 in cash marked with an ultraviolet marker.

In exchange, Lazarde allegedly agreed to not show up in court to testify in the man's case. Police said Lazarde was stopped as he left the meeting and found to be in possession of the marked money.

Lazarde resigned from the department April 21 and turned himself in Thursday morning.

He is charged with bribery, theft by extortion and criminal use of a communication facility.

Gunfire. Man killed in North Philadelphia double shooting

A 30-year-old man was shot and killed in a double shooting in North Philadelphia Wednesday.

The gunfire erupted shortly after 8 p.m. on the 1700 block of West Cumberland Street, police said.

Arriving officers found that two men had been shot, including Marquize Roebuck, of the 4800 block of North 10th Street. Roebuck sustained gunshot wounds to his head and upper back.

He was rushed to Temple University Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 8:19 p.m.

The second victim, a 19-year-old male, was shot in his thigh.

Father of slain man linked to Boston bomb suspects wants FBI agents tried Shot. He questioned accounts at a news conference in Moscow, saying his son was unarmed. He said he suspected his son might have been killed to keep him silent.

The father of a Chechen immigrant shot dead during FBI questioning over his links with the Boston Marathon bombing suspects said on Thursday that the American agents responsible were "bandits" who should face trial.

The FBI has said that Ibragim Todashev, 27, was being questioned at his apartment in Florida on May 22 when he suddenly attacked an agent and was shot and killed because of the "imminent threat posed by the individual."

"I want justice, and I want there to be an investigation, so that these people are tried under American law," said Todashev. "These are not FBI agents but bandits — I cannot call them anything else, and they must be tried."

He showed reporters photographs of his son's shirtless corpse on a medical table with stitched-up, purplish wounds on his torso, arm and head. REUTERS

Secret Service probes note sent to Obama

Authorities intercepted a threatening letter addressed to President Barack Obama that was similar to ones sent to New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, the Secret Service said on Thursday.

Letters sent to Bloomberg and his gun control group contained material believed to be the deadly poison ricin and contained a reference to gun control, New York police said on Wednesday.

A Secret Service official said the White House letter was similar but did not elaborate.

The White House mail screening facility turned the letter over to the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force, the Secret Service official said on condition of anonymity. REUTERS

Licenses recommend for self-driving cars

U.S. auto safety regulators outlined plans on Thursday to analyze the safety risks and benefits of self-driving cars over the next four years.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration urged states to bar operation of autonomous cars for purposes other than testing. But if states allow commercial use of these vehicles, drivers should undergo additional training and obtain special licenses, the agency said. REUTERS

Mystery. TIGHAR possibly locates Earhart's plane

Researchers have been trying to track Amelia Earhart's plane after it mysteriously disappeared in 1937.

More than 10 years ago, The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery (TIGHAR) isolated the Pacific island of Nikumaroro as the location where her plane likely went down. Now, the organization says that underwater sonar images taken during a 2012 island visit support the location theory.

TIGHAR believes Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, put down on the coral flats at the western end of the island.

Since discovering the location in 2000, other clues have been found, including shards of plexiglass from a windscreen and aluminum from an aircraft body. Theories also suggest that Earhart and Noonan survived on the island for some time before dying of injury or infection.

The grainy photo reveals there is something approximately 600 feet below the surface. TIGHAR is calling it an "anomaly."

"The most prominent part of the anomaly appears to be less than 32 feet long," TIGHAR's website says.

Earhart's plane was reportedly 38 feet 7 inches long.

AMERICA: THE NO VACATION NATION

I was sitting in my backyard last night when my dog walked up. "You look tired," she said. "What's the matter?"

"Oh nothing," I replied. "Just beat. Too many hours at the office. Too many emails. You know how it is."

"Actually, no," she said. "I'm unemployed and I lack opposable thumbs, but I get the idea. You know what you need, my friend? A vacation." She's right. And I suspect I am not the only one.

Yet, once again, as summer gins up, millions of us will not be joining the ranks of those bound for beaches, resorts and theme parks. Some people can't afford the trip; others fear that layoff-hungry bosses will see them as "lazy." And according to a study by the Center for Economic and Policy Research, about a quarter of us are allotted no vacation time by our employers.

Quoted

Yet, once again, as summer gins up, millions of us will not be joining the ranks of those bound for beaches, resorts and theme parks.

In this regard, labor rights advocates have long complained that we lag far behind virtually every other major nation where vacation time is not only taken much more readily, but required by law. In Japan, workers receive a minimum of 10 days of vacation. In Germany, it jumps to 24 days. And in France, it's up to 30. No surprise there — I suppose you don't get that passionate about cheese without having some time on your hands, n'est-ce pas?

Still, the fact remains that most people living in the industrialized world take longer and more frequent breaks than do Americans. You can argue we've built an amazingly strong nation and economy through all of our hard work, despite recent setbacks. But I'm beginning to wonder if, by limiting, shortchanging or just plain skipping so many vacations, we're burning out the very "get 'er done" spirit that has led us to greatness and can help us recover now; we're losing our perspective and energy; we're going a little crazy.

So if you are planning to skip your vacation … don't. Take the time. Recharge. That's my plan, and I think it's overdue. After all, I'm talking to dogs.

HERE'S WHAT'S SEXY

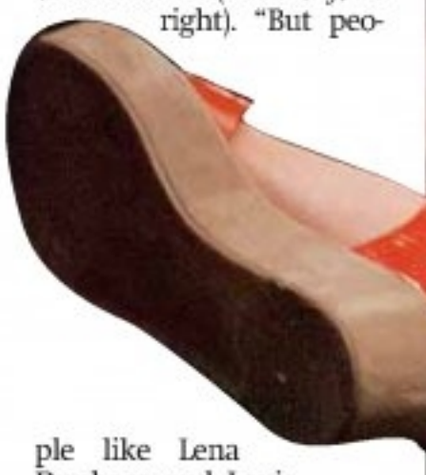
Trend. With "Girls" a hit and plus-sized models becoming the norm, we wonder: Are the days of the blonde bimbo over?

The biggest sex story of the past year didn't happen between Christian and Anastasia in some porn your mom read — it happened in Brooklyn when Adam banged Hannah and probably gave her an STD. The HBO series "Girls," with its frank depiction of bad dirty talk, venereal diseases, abortions, miscarriages and condom spill, is all about sex. But unlike "Sex and the City" before it, this show is a global hit partly because star/creator Lena Dunham is, well, average-looking. She's a chubby, tattooed, thin-haired 26-year-old. She's normal.

The hype comes at the perfect time for the "real beauty" movement — and for this Metro Sex Issue, themed "Feel Good Naked." Within the past month, plus-size model Jennie Runk made headlines when H+M debuted her modeling swimwear (despite being a dress size 14-16, not 0). Dove soap, on the tails of an ad campaign featuring plus-size women, launched an "anti-Photoshop" app that restores images to their original form. And "amateur" porn is the most popular category on YouPorn, ranking higher than "blondes." The house that Jenna Jameson built is crumbling. The question is: How quickly?

So yes, how quickly?

In one year, or in five? "I don't think five years is enough," says Gabi Gregg, 26, a plus-size blogger. Her work went viral last year after she posted photos of herself looking sensual in a "fatkini" and, this week, she launches her own line of swimwear (see story, at right). "But people like Lena Dunham and Louis C.K. are opening doors. Just the fact that her body makes people so angry — if you read the comments, people are telling her to put on clothes. She has said that only makes her want to do it more. It's my favorite show."



Arielle Loren doesn't watch "Girls," but also traffics in blunt depictions of sex. Her magazine Corset (www.corsetmagazine.com) features graphic nudity and first-person erotica, and resembles someone's beautifully photographed diary. It became profitable after a year, and Loren sees it as part of a movement. "The way we learn about sex, the pornography industry drives a lot of that consciousness," says Loren, a 27-year-old American. "It starts to inform the way we think about 'sexy' from an early age. But there are multifaceted aspects of sex and what it can really be, which we explore in the magazine. That goes from everything you can do in the bedroom — physically — but also how we understand our bodies."

A recent Corset photoshoot, "Breasts in Erotic Daylight," features a brown bosom with stretch marks. "We definitely don't airbrush," says Loren. "There's something very sexy about that. Being able to see the hair follicles on a breast or the stretch marks on a woman's stomach." She now has subscribers here, in Canada, Peru, Brazil, Sweden and beyond.

And yet post a photo of a plus size-model online and you see not everyone's as accepting. Exhibit A: Jennie Runk.

Junk in Runk's trunk

The excitement (and debate) over Runk's H+M campaign made it all the way to Italy, where she was working in May. It led to at least one sleepless night. "I was thinking about all the media I've been getting and my mom reads a lot of the comments and she said, 'I can't believe somebody called you fat,'" remembers the 24-year-old, "and some people on the other side were like, 'The curvier bodies are better!' and it's so ridiculous that people are having these ar-

Tip from Corset editor

- Do the self-work. "Start by walking around your house naked. If you have a roommate, shut your door and walk around your room naked. The more you get comfortable with your naked self — not covering yourself up with a towel every time you take a shower, taking the time to be in your body and open like that — your confidence will slowly and steadily increase."
Loren, on how to feel good naked

Dunham is just one of the "Girls." The actress has said she wouldn't want a body like a Victoria's Secret model. / HBO

The model

"It's ridiculous that people are arguing. We should focus on embracing all sizes."

guments. What if some girl looks at these pictures and looks exactly like me: How is she going to feel?"

She turned to Facebook with a post. "I've noticed that people like to debate what kind of body is better than another," she wrote. "This is all wrong! To me, true beauty is defined by a healthy lifestyle and a genuine personality. Bodies are just meaty things that carry our personhoods around for us." A week later, Runk is still riled up. She notes that "bigger" models are getting more work, but "we should focus on embracing all sizes," she says bluntly.

"Should" is different than "are." The chart below shows the Sex Symbols of 2013, as selected by our editors from a pool of working actors who have notable projects this year — there are more shapes and sizes than there would have been in 1985, but it's still very thin and white. "We're going in the right direction," says Gregg, "but ... "

"This argument," adds Runk, "is going to be a thing of the past when — honestly, I don't know." On Facebook, she was more hopeful, saying it's "our differences that make us remarkable."

She laughs when she hears that again. "I've been told before I'm a little too naive."

'FATKINI' DESIGNER GABI GREGG

The Gabifresh.com blogger just crafted a line for Swimsuitsforall.com.

In school, did you realize you were bigger than everybody else?
Yes and no. I wasn't teased too much, luckily. It was mostly internal, feeling insecure next to my classmates, if they were thinner than me or had blonde hair. Nobody had to say anything. And I started trying to diet when I was in middle school and high school, and it wasn't until college that I came to accept myself.

How do the suits, um, work?
What do you mean by work? [Laughs]

They fit so well. Is it made with a binding material, with latches or something?
Actually, no. I've had people ask about support, of course, but there's nothing special about the fabric of the suits. It's normal bathing suit fabric. In terms of the Galaxy suit, what makes it so special is the print — it's graphic and fun and looks great because it's so busy that it — I don't want to say it distracts the eye, because I don't care about that sort of thing, but that's what it does. And the high-waisted cut looks great on all women.

Are you OK with the term "fatkini"?
Yes. I didn't use it this year because it went so viral last year, and it was inspiring for many people but took away from it, for others, because they were stuck on the word and got angry and started commenting. It's a reclamation of the word "fat," especially in our community, we all get it. When it goes outside the community, people get angry and send emails. But I'm fine with it. At the end of the day, it's a fatkini because I'm fat and wearing a bikini. [Laughs]

How much do you weigh now?
I believe I'm around 225.

How tall are you?
I'm 5-foot-5.

Do you get flack for not being "fat enough?" Early on, there were some comments.
I don't get a lot. Once in a while, like when the bikini pictures come out. It's funny to see half the people commenting are disgusted by my body and the other half are like, fat women saying, "She's shaped so nicely so it doesn't count! I have fat hanging from my arm that she doesn't have!" I try to avoid the comments on other sites. Some women wish they could see women bigger than me in a bikini and I understand that but I can only be myself. SAM CASTONE

How to feel good naked

Health. The author of "WomanCode" turns your body into a "power source" with these sexy tips.

Bloating. Zits. Decreased sex drive. If you're a woman, and you're aging up, we may have just described your average Tuesday night. Alisa Vitti, a hormonal health expert and the author of "WomanCode," a book about "supercharging your sex drive," says it doesn't have to be that way. "What's normal is a sex drive that increases as you age," she says. "You need to train the body to maximize the kinds of foods that provide us with micronutrients that help us produce optimal levels of hormones, metabolize them and get them out of the body." It all starts with your diet.

AVOID:

SOY: More specifically, soy protein isolate. It's packed full of estrogen, which risks to exacerbate hormonal symptoms. However, small quantities of fermented soy, such as miso paste, tofu and tempeh, are OK.

COW'S MILK: It contains casein, a protein that can make it difficult for nutrients to get to the target glands of the endocrine system (a collection of glands that secrete hormones). This can make it difficult for proper hormonal function and elimination and worsen symptoms such as acne. Concerned about calcium? Bok Choy and sesame seeds are good alternatives to dairy.

WHEAT: Actually, it's the protein that gives wheat-based foods such as pizza their chewy texture: gluten. It has been shown to decrease fertility by raising stress levels.

LOAD UP ON:

GREEN JUICE: The antioxidant glutathione, present in raw fruit and vegetables, helps with egg quality, liver detoxification and to protect the ovaries. One juice a day is enough, just blend together some kale, cucumber, parsley, ginger, lemon and apple.

EGGS: These help the body make progesterone, the hormone that opposes estrogen and keeps you balanced in terms of your mood.

AVOCADO: This is a great source of essential fatty acids. As hormones are stabilized in a lipid ring, EFA's help keep them stable and function properly.

SPINACH and KALE: The dark, leafy greens contain calcium and magnesium that help the body break down and eliminate estrogen, which in excess, is at the root of many hormonal symptoms.

Jesse Jane

Ela Darling

What's hot? Nerds. What's not? Blondes?

Report. In the porn world, the blonde bombshell is losing out to "more natural" types. "But I don't think one is more acceptable than the other," says one star.

At one point in her life, the woman we now know as Ela Darling was a librarian. But the 9 to 5 routine bored her. So she began posing in bondage shoots. Then she posed in nude bondage photography. Soon after, Ela was starring in lesbian and BSDM videos and hosting own website (www.darlingela.com), which she calls "pretty porn for smart people."

"I decided that if you put the nude and bondage together, you basically had porn," Ela tells us. "So, I decided to give it a shot — and I really, really liked it." The skinny, 5-foot-8 B-cup library nerd had become a porn star.

The girl next door

These days, your porn performer isn't always a hot blonde in a cheerleader outfit. Instead, she may resemble the actual girl next door. The most popular videos on YouPorn fall into the amateur category, and — whether it's filled with actual amateurs or not — there you'll find small breasts, stretch marks, acne, lanky bodies, big noses and other all-natural qualities.

Quoted

Girls are made up to look like "someone you would see in Starbucks."

Jesse Jane, porn star

"There's always been a market for the girl next door, [where[everybody's natural, but it's really popular now," veteran porn star Jesse Jane, now in her 11th year doing films, told Metro World News.

She says the Internet has led to the rise in "amateur" acts. People can enter the industry by posting on the Web instead of having to vie for the few contracts with an adult entertainment company.

"Before, you would know who the top porn girls were," Jesse says. "Now, you wouldn't be able to name a handful of the girls who are in the industry. Before, they made the focus on a star and built the companies around a girl, making that girl the fantasy."

Zombie porn

Jesse may be one of the last of the contract girls. Blonde and bubbly with large fake breasts, she's exactly what you picture when you hear the words "porn star." She has noticed that recent girls she's worked with have been selected to look like "someone you would see in Starbucks."

Ela believes the reason why we're seeing so many regular-looking people is because of a movement to embrace who we are. For Ela — the girl-next-door with a fairy-like quality — that means that sometimes she's dressed up as a zombie. Sometimes she's peddling sweaty, smelly shoes to foot fetishists. Sometimes she's starring in BDSM videos, experimenting with machines and trying out being hog-tied and tortured.

"What I didn't even realize shooting porn is how much I began to evolve in my comfort with sex and with my own body," she says. (The same could be said for the viewer, who can explore their basest fantasies in their living rooms.) Given that all-inclusive feeling she, for one, may dislike our photo above, pitting two women against one another. "There's lots of different 'persons' [in porn)] but I don't think one is more acceptable than the other. People pursue porn in a way that's comfortable to them."

Jane, for one, isn't worried about a face-off either.

"The blonde girl for some reason, I don't think that market will ever go away with the porn girls with big fake boobs," she says between a giggle. "I think that will always be there."

THEIR ROLES:
Buster is a lowly movie projectionist who one day wills himself into the detective film he's screening. Joe plays the father of "The Girl."

THE RESULT:
Joe and his wife Myra were vaudeville legends who started using Buster in their act when he was only a few years old. Buster's shtick involved being thrown about the stage. Buster later repaid the favor by giving his father, by then a full-on alkie, bit parts in his some of his masterpieces.

Will and Jaden Smith teaming up for "After Earth" has us thinking of other real-life parent-child movies. MATT PRIGGE

Blipp this pic to see how father and son Will and Jaden Smith fare in their postapocalyptic romp "After Earth." / COLUMBIA PICTURES

In theaters

Will and Jaden Smith

The film: 'After Earth' (2013)
Their ages: 44 and 14
Their roles: Will is a space general who tries to survive on a dangerous postapocalyptic Earth alongside his son, played by Jaden.
The result: Jaden is the luckiest kid in the world, whose father bought him "The Karate Kid." But their films together aren't pretty: "The Pursuit of Happyness," made when Jaden was 8, found them pursuing the American dream while spending nights on the street or in dodgy shelters.

The actors, films	Their ages	Their roles	The results
Melvin and Mario Van Peebles 'Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song' (1971)	39, 14	Melvin plays an entertainer at a brothel falsely accused by "The Man." Mario plays his younger self in a fairly graphic introductory scene where he loses his virginity to a prostitute. Thanks, dad!	Even though what was shot very nearly qualifies as child pornography, it apparently wasn't traumatic. Mario grew up idolizing and often working with his father. He became a filmmaker himself, making "New Jack City" and "Baadasssss!" — an account of the making of his father's pioneering black cinema classic. Mario even stars as his wildly charismatic, cigar-chomping, ladykiller pop.
Ryan and Tatum O'Neal 'Paper Moon' (1973)	32, 10	Ryan is a charismatic con man in the Depression-era South who collects fraudulent fees from rubes for bibles. Tatum plays a little girl who may be his daughter. She proves a grifting prodigy.	Ryan, often a wooden rent-a-hunk, was atypically alive and hilarious in this Peter Bogdanovich comedy. Ditto, for that matter, Tatum, who became the youngest-ever Oscar winner. She did "The Bad News Bears" but struggled through an adult career. Ryan, meanwhile, did two more films of major note ("Barry Lyndon" and "The Driver"), but soon returned to crap films. Their relationship became strained. Tatum alleged that Ryan hit on her at Farah Fawcett's funeral.
Harry and Jane Fonda 'On Golden Pond' (1981)	76, 44	Henry is a crotchety, terminally sweary old-timer who is estranged from his daughter, played by Jane. This isn't that far from the truth, except that Henry wasn't married to Katharine Hepburn.	The two were famously estranged, despite him being, like her, a liberal, back when such a thing wasn't cool. The film helped them patch things up, just as happens in the film. Henry died soon after winning his first Oscar, which Jane accepted on his behalf.
Charlie and Martin Sheen 'Wall Street' (1987)	47, 22	Charlie is an upstart who gets associated with the wrong scene, while his father scowls. They also acted in this movie together.	The two would reunite, for about 10 seconds, in "Hot Shots Part Deux," in a scene that parodies "Apocalypse Now": Passing by each other on ships, they simultaneously stand and proclaim, "Loved you in 'Wall Street!'"
Sylvester and Sage Stallone 'Rocky V' (1990)	63, 26	Sly is a slow mumblemouth who solved the Cold War, but is still stuck penniless in a miserable South Philly neighborhood because his brother-in-law Paulie is an idiot. Sage is his resentful son who gets an earring.	Sage took over the role of Rocky Jr. from someone actually named Rocky Krakoff. He didn't get great reviews, but neither did the film. Still, he acted again with his dad in "Daylight," and appears in Vincent Gallo's "Promises Written in Water," which Gallo won't let anyone see. Last year, Sage died of a heart attack at 36 years old.
Jon Voight and Angelina Jolie 'Lara Croft: Tomb Raider' (2001)	44, 14	Jolie is a buxom archaeologist who does all the things that Indiana Jones can't, like have breasts. Voight is her dead father who she meets in an alternate dimension.	Jolie and Voight have had a bumpy relationship. They reconnected as her career exploded, then "broke up" again, then came back together after her mother's death. Still, Voight said he found out about her double mastectomy with everyone else.

It's better than 'The Last Airbender'

Will and Jaden Smith get stranded on our postapocalyptic planet in "After Earth." / COLUMBIA PICTURES

Father-son sci-fi. M. Night Shyamalan tries to get out of the way of the Smiths.

M. Night Shyamalan has had it rough the last decade, or as rough as a millionaire hot-shot Hollywood director can have it. Scorn has been heaped on his work, a lot of it earned. "The Happening" and "The Last Airbender" are dreadful (honestly, so is "The Sixth Sense"), but even those have a unique, stubborn sensibility all his own. In the future, film historians will likely chide audiences and critics of the present for mistreating an unusual genius. For better or worse, a good deal of Shyamalan's personality is suppressed in "After Earth," which is perhaps not coincidentally his closest-to-good film since "Signs."

Yet another postapocalyptic romp, made in collaboration with the Smiths — that is, Will and Jaden — it stars the former (who conceived the story) as the amusingly named Cypher Raige, a space general we're told is "so completely free of fear he's invisible." (Okay, then.) His son Kitai (Jaden) isn't quite so brave. But as luck would have it, an accident strands them on the long-ago abandoned Earth. Cypher is rewarded with a pair of broken legs, leaving Kitai to man up and trek the fearsome wild to save them.

"After Earth" promises a boys' adventure in the order of Cornel Wilde's '60s African chase jaunt "The Naked Prey." It about half-delivers. "Everything on this planet has evolved to kill humans," Cypher warns. If only. The scary futuristic animals —slightly-angrier-than-before monkeys, a kind of mega-hawk — are easily avoided, even nice when properly prodded. For a trek into the danger zone, this is curiously light on thrills and spills.

'After Earth'

Director. M. Night Shyamalan

Stars. Jaden Smith, Will Smith

Rating. PG-13

Shyamalan mostly stays out of the way, but he still makes himself known — and not in good ways. For someone who directed one of the screen's greatest child performances, Shyamalan's a terrible director of child actors. Jaden, a likable braggart in "The Karate Kid" remake, is only a mite less awkward and declamatory than the kids in "The Last Airbender."

His father is another story. Playing stern and taciturn, Will Smith is cast against type, but he's all the more imposing because he's forcibly concealing his natural warm spirits. One forever expects him to crack a smile and say "Just kidding." He doesn't, ever, and that tension puts him on list of excellent actors, with Toni Colette and Paul Giamatti, who can make Shyamalan's films — stiff, heavy, childish and borderline amateurish, if often intriguingly so — seem briefly natural.

Sorry, you've been had

Stupid magic caper. This star-studded monstrosity is memorable — for the wrong reasons.

Jesse Eisenberg just needed the money, which is why he's in "Now You See Me." / BARRY WETCHER, SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT

A friend once said it was wrong to seek a simple, rational understanding of Andrei Tarkovsky's "The Mirror." The same could be said about "Now You See Me." The difference is that "The Mirror" is a mysterious, confounding art-film masterpiece, while "Now You See Me" is a silly magician thriller that plays like the ravings of a madman.

Jesse Eisenberg headlines a comically overqualified cast as one of a quartet of sleight-of-hand experts embroiled in a simple plan: Become world-famous magicians who, while performing in the largest auditorium in Vegas, mysriously steal money from a bank in France and spread the wealth among their packed house. Why? How? It's never clear.

The actors look as lost as the audience: Poor Mark Ruffalo, as a detective, seems as frustrated as his character, forced to utter inane dialogue against inexplicable actions. Amazing tricks are rarely explained. If they are, the explanations would require more money, planning and manpower than necessary given the end goal. Not since "Dreamcatcher" has a major studio product been so consistently and hilariously dumb.

A legend of LGBT cinema returns

Interview. The heads of Milestone Films talk about bringing back Shirley Clarke's 1967 classic "Portrait of Jason.".

On Dec. 3, 1966, filmmaker Shirley Clarke and crew crammed into her two-room apartment at the Chelsea Hotel. For 12 hours they filmed Jason Holliday, an openly gay black cabaret performer in his early 40s (though he claimed he was 30-something). Holliday regaled them with stories, by turns amusing and horrific, peppered with his incessant giggling, as though he was trying not to cry (he came close).

Today, "Portrait of Jason" offers a piercing look at sexual and racial relations before gay rights — if you've gotten to see it, which has been difficult. "Jason" was available on DVD in the U.K., but from a transfer off a faded, dim fifth-generation print. The team at Milestone Films, namely Amy Heller and Dennis Doros, spent four years tracking down materials for a new restoration. For funding they turned to Kickstarter.

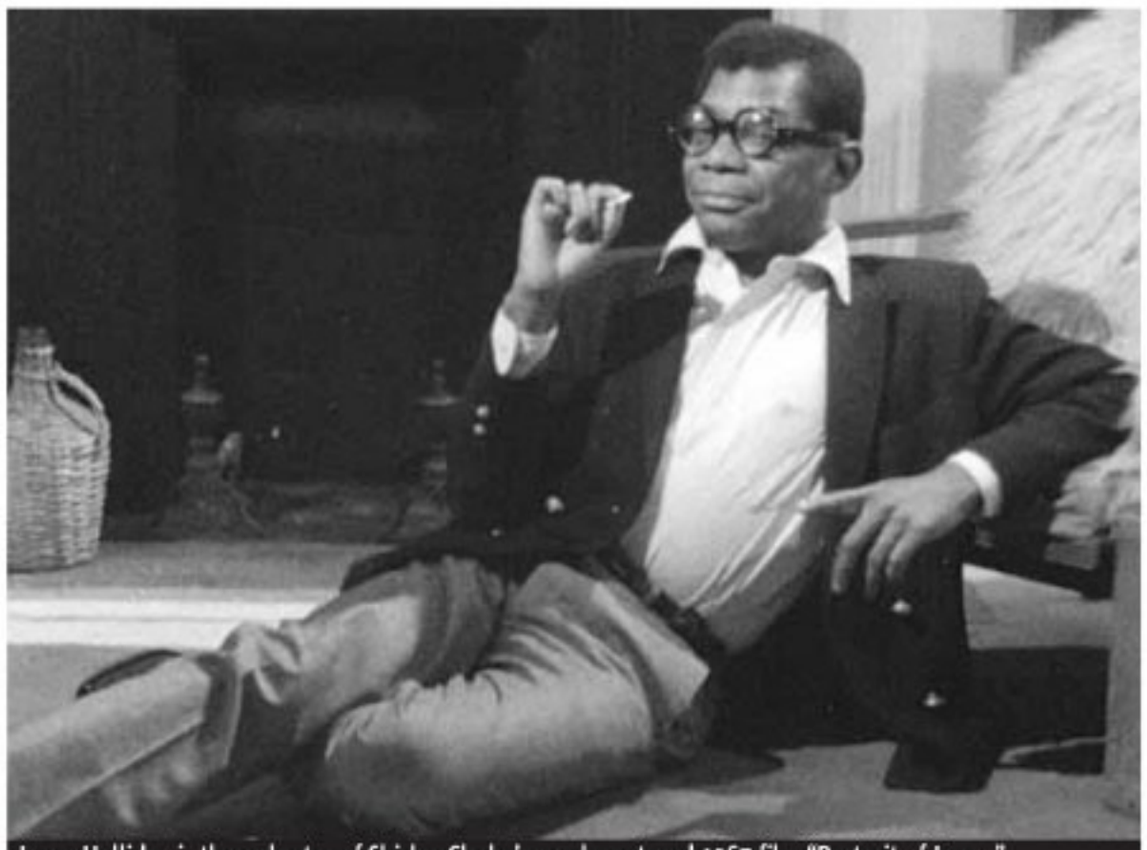
"It's a scary thing to do," says Heller of the Kickstarter campaign, "especially at a moment when you don't know what the technology will be when you finish." Many theaters are abandoning film for digital projection. "Jason" still has some 35mm film prints for screening. And it's not a good idea to abandon celluloid completely.

"Digital restorations are not archival," explains Heller. Technology changes quickly, and a file made today may not have a program that could read it in the future — even the near future. But for film, all you need is a working projector. "It was important for us to get the film exported to 35mm. That way people will be able to go back and transfer it to the best technology of the future."

Digital restoration has its issues, too. "The real challenge is to make it look like film," says Doros. "You don't want it too clean." He says a lot of restoration artists wind up cleaning up the grain, in part because it's a different shape than digital pixels: grain are little dots, whereas pixels are square.

This also means trying to respect the look Clarke was going for. "Shirley wanted it to look rough. That's why it looks like outtakes," says Heller. They had Clarke's daughter Wendy, who was close to the production, on hand to ensure they didn't make it look too "good."

"Portrait of Jason," which runs theatrically at IFC Center, is a thrillingly intimate portrait, both of a person and an era when homosexuality was illegal. (Sodmoy laws existed on the New York books until 1983.) "How do you meet other people if you can't go anywhere and be yourself?" asks Heller. "There were so many oppressions against a guy like Jason."



Jason Holliday is the only star of Shirley Clarke's newly restored 1967 film "Portrait of Jason."

Family history that doesn't bore others

Documentary. Actress-filmmaker Sarah Polley finds family skeletons in "Stories We Tell."

Sarah Polley's documentary "Stories We Tell" looks at her family's history. / ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS

In "The Stories We Tell," Sarah Polley's documentary about her family, there eventually crops up a genuinely crazy twist: The man the actress-turned-filmmaker thought was her father turns out not to be. In fact, her biological father was a film producer with whom her boisterous mother had an affair.

Oddly, it's the mundane material that proves more interesting. The man who raised her proves a sadly common tragic figure, one who let life ruin his youthful ambitions. Like Michael Apted's "Up" documentary series, it's a portrait of everyday disappointment, a reminder of how most of us so easily abandon our dreams.

That said, this is not a depressing film. It's a lively and playful one, constantly cutting to staged Super 8-style recreations of moments that were never filmed, but live on in collective memory like ghosts. Polley's fiction films ("Away From Her," "Take This Waltz") are heavy, if also perceptive. It's clear from "Stories We Tell" she's her best when she doesn't appear to be trying.

PETER SARSGAARD

The actor talks about going from film to TV by joining "The Killing."

A KILLER INSIDE HIM

The third season of AMC's crime procedural "The Killing," which premieres this Sunday, has a new storyline and some new cast members. Among the neophytes is Peter Sarsgaard, a talented actor who's been among the best things in "Boys Don't Cry," "Garden State," "Shattered Glass" and "An Education." In his first season-long television stint — which he was still shooting when we talked — Sarsgaard plays Ray Seward, a sinister death row inmate who killed his wife.

Quoted

"If you don't believe in the death penalty, you have to take an extreme circumstance — someone who's indefensible — to see if it still applies." Peter Sarsgaard, on playing a death row inmate

What are the challenges of playing a death row inmate?
So much of my story takes place in the same spot. In a lot of movies, there's the car chase, the scene at breakfast, the sex scene. This is about always going to the same cell. You have to find ways of doing a different dance on the same dance floor.

Was those challenges what drew you to "The Killing?"
Those, and also because the issues interested me. I'm very much against the death penalty. It's very easy to do a piece about someone who's been railroaded by the system who's innocent. If you don't believe in the death penalty, you have to take an extreme circumstance — someone who's indefensible — to see if it still applies. Otherwise, the death penalty applies in some cases.

What made you want to work on TV?
Just this show. I always really liked this show. I thought this material was better than some of the film stuff I was being offered. It seemed there was more of a role there.

There's much less of a fear these days for serious actors to do TV.
So many of my favorite actors are on television. So, if you want to act with them you have to be on television.

How is TV acting different from stage or film acting?
It's really fast. And because you don't know the show as well as the showrunners or the writers, you're more at their mercy. On a film you'll know the whole story, and you'll go up to the director and say "Oh, this doesn't seem right to me, this entire scene." And we'll work on it or they'll tell me to shut the f— up. There's more interaction about content. But on TV, with a series like this, you just have to trust them.

A rude awakening for The-Dream

R&B. Hip-hop's premier songwriter goes from racy to ratchet with his brand new album.

The-Dream has always been a sex-obsessed R&B genius, but now he's turned things up a notch. On his new album, "IV Play," which drops this week, the singer, songwriter and producer isn't afraid to express his desires. He says the extra dose of risque talk and bawdy calls for sex are a reflection of where he's at in his life, and where we're at as a society. For the uninitiated, this is ratchet-infused R&B.

"I'd like to think it's a very vibe-y, adult album," says the man born Terius Nash. "I've been out, I've been in clubs so I know we're in the ratchet era of things. I'm sure there's been a lot of ratchetness on my album because of what's been going through our culture, which is a good thing, by the way. The 'ratchet' word sounds like it's negative, but it's actually more free than most R&B songs could be, than pop could be. 'I don't give a f—' — that's basically what it's saying."

If "IV Play" embraces more explicit come-ons — and a few more drug references — than we're used to, it still boasts the same sound we'd expect from the musical mastermind behind some of the most memorable songs in modern R&B. The-Dream has crafted megahits for the likes of Beyonce ("Single Ladies (Put a Ring on It)"), Rihanna ("Umbrella") and Justin Bieber ("Baby"), and racked up multiple Grammy Awards, so it's no surprise that industry heavyweights like Jay-Z, Beyonce, Pusha T and 2

The score

The-Dream says he is also making his foray into film by scoring two movies and producing what he says is "a 'Boyz n the Hood'-type" flick."

- "My point is not just to do film scoring — it's to make films, period," he says. "So I'm on my Ice Cube s— right now."

The-Dream's new album, "IV Play" dropped Tuesday. He's currently on tour with Kelly Rowland.
MIKE COPPOLA, WIREIMAGE

Quote

"It's like, 'Yo, this is where I am in my life.' I can't make a video or an album for a child that's 16." The-Dream, on his new, naughtier approach

Chainz appear on "IV Play," which rounds out a handful of edgier tracks with sweet serenades and dark, introspective numbers.

The wave of ratchet hip-hop may not be the most surprising influence on "IV Play," though. You may also hear some classical music making its way into the compositions. The-Dream says it's his favorite genre.

"When those brass horns come in, there's drama tied to that. When the flutes come in, there's some type of majestic feeling that comes over you," he says of the classical compositions he's often listening to.

The-Dream says American culture pays more attention to fashion choices and rumors than the most important factor concerning an artist — the music.

"All those genius [composers] were probably kind of crazy themselves, but what we took from them most was that their music was outstanding," he says.

Ross Mathews wants you to 'Man Up'

Summer interns, take heart. Ross Mathews, an E! News and "Chelsea Lately" regular who has rubbed elbows with everyone from soap opera stars to Michelle Obama, got his start as an intern for "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno." He just came out with "Man Up!: Tales of My Delusional Self-Confidence," a book about his climb up the Hollywood ladder. How high up did he get? Gwyneth Paltrow wrote the intro.

Have you always been obsessed with Hollywood?
Oh, totally. Ever since I was just a little kid growing up in a farm town, I have loved pop culture.

How did you make the move from Tonight Show intern to Tonight Show correspondent?
It just sort of happened naturally. They just thought I was funny. Luckily, I had wanted to work in television for my entire life, so it just worked.

Were there times as you rose up the Hollywood ladder where you felt like you had gone as far as you could go?
Nope. I've always believed I would achieve everything I wanted. I'm just getting started.

What's the one thing you want readers to take away from the book?
That if I can love myself the way I am — a big gay cartoon version of a human — and celebrate myself, they can, too.

What was your favorite celebrity encounter?
That's too difficult, like trying to pick my favorite dog! I would never.

How about your least favorite?
There is a certain someone, but I'll never tell. Unless you take me to happy hour — I'll tell everything after a pinot grigio or two.

Ross Mathews will be on stage at the TLA at 8 p.m. on Sunday. / PROVIDED

Q&A

I thought I'd ask and she'd say no, and I'd move on. But, to my amazement, she said, "Of course!"

Mathews, in answer to, "Was Gwyneth Paltrow willing to write the 'Man Up!' intro right away, or did it take some convincing?"

Banana Republic and Milly head to the Hamptons

Shopping. This new designer collaboration is perfect for your weekend jaunts.

Banana Republic and Milly designer Michelle Smith teamed up for a limited-edition capsule inspired by summers in New York's beach town, the Hamptons. The concept is perfect for Smith, whose main line consists of bold, graphic prints — the kind you want to live in during those days of lobster roll lunches. But before you think the process was a day at the beach, the partnership marked the first time Smith ventured into menswear. The results: peppy separates for the man who's not afraid of color. And since beach season is here, we pulled three of our favorite looks from the 60-piece line, in stores now. If you haven't booked your summer house yet, here's some inspiration to get you moving.

'The Internship' crashers

Buddies (and co-stars) Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn posed together at the premiere of their new film "The Internship" at the Regency Village Theatre on Wednesday in Westwood, Calif.

Love hasn't seen her daughter Frances in three years

This makes my heart ache. Courtney Love, grunge's version of Dina Lohan (alternately: The OG Amanda Bynes), admits in an interview on the "Howard Stern Show" that she hasn't seen her daughter Frances Bean Cobain in three years. And yet, things are "really good" between them.

"I'm really good with my daughter right now," she told the shock-jock. Despite the fact they haven't seen each other in the flesh, they "email and tweet." And, really, if your mother is Courtney Love, emailing and tweeting without seeing each other is probably the stuff that happy and healthy mother-daughter relationships are made of.

Love also disclosed that she's going to appear on a reality show, but demurred as to which one. Stern desperately wants it to be "American Idol," which, um, yes please. If not, "Duck Dynasty" could also work.

Beckham teams up with Ramsay in Las Vegas?

With his days playing soccer behind him, David Beckham is clearly on the lookout for new ways to spend his time.

One way, as it turns out, is teaming with pal Gordon Ramsay to open a sports bar and grill in the Wynn Hotel in Las Vegas, according to the Sun.

"The Strip has never seen such fierce competition for food, but Gordon's places are full seven nights a week," a source tells the newspaper. "When you add David Beckham's global status into the mix, it has the potential to be the most talked-about restaurant in Vegas."

But not so fast, everybody. Beckham's rep insists that the rumors of the Vegas joint venture are completely unfounded, though they are opening a London restaurant, Union Street Cafe, in September.

Stewart's never had, um, pizza?

If Patrick Stewart's Twitter account is to be believed, the "X-Men" star has never had a slice of pizza — until now. Stewart posted a photo of himself indulging in some of New York's finest, along with the caption, "My first ever pizza 'slice.' Please note the authentic NY fold." It is curious, of course, that he put slice in quotes. A follow-up tweet by Stewart to offer clarification actually didn't offer much clarification: "To clarify," he wrote, "I've never had a 'slice.'" Well, the important thing is that he has now.

Shakira wants to breastfeed her son until college

Shakira wants to make sure her son never goes hungry. Very, very sure. The "Voice" judge is so into breastfeeding her 4-month-old son Milan that she has no plans to stop until he is legally old enough to refuse.

"Breastfeeding has been one of the best experiences of my life," she told Us Weekly. "I love it! I can't stop!" She added, "I think I'm going to breastfeed him until he goes to college! I'm hooked!"

Well, gross! But despite the hyperbole, Shakira does seem adorably into motherhood. She says she's never been as chilled out as she is with Milan.

"I thought I was going to be super-controlling," she said. "It's so surprising because everybody thought I was going to be one of those hysterical mothers, like smothering mothers, and I feel that I'm not as nervous. I'm relaxed."

Yeah, one of those nonsmothering, relaxed mothers who insists on breastfeeding for all eternity. Good luck, Milan.

Naughty tweets

There was some discord earlier this month among the Naughty by Nature crew, but that seems to be resolved now, at least according to a tweet from the group's Vin Rock this week:

"June 1st will be historic! For the 1st time in 22yrs Naughty will rock a full set with a live band. Not just any live band its the World Famous Roots Crew."

Fuse hip-hop and indie rock for a 'Lush' sound

Concert. Rising Philly rapper Lushlife is ready to play The Roots Picnic.

Lushlife is bringing his diverse sound to the Roots Picnic.
FRIENDS OF FRIENDS NETWORK

Philly hip-hop emcee and producer Lushlife has led a secret life.

"As a kid, I led two secret lives: one as a hip-hop head, listening to A Tribe Called Quest, Nas and Black Moon; and another where I was knee-deep in '80s and '90s alternative rock like The Smiths and The Pixies," said Lushlife, aka Raj Haldar, of South Philly.

Those pursuits formed the foundation for his innovative music. By merging divergent sounds, his songs veer seamlessly from a Burt Bacharach-ish melodic glossiness to a boombox-y street rawness. He's probably the only one who can get away with authentically name-checking New York City hip-hop icons M.O.P. and seminal punk rock originator Richard Hell in the same song, as he does in "Hale-Bopp was the Bedouins" from 2012's "Plateau Vision."

"These interests seemed so divergent to me at the time," Lushlife says. "But now, that pedigree in the classic canon of hip-hop and indie rock is what I think makes my records work. I hope my records sound fluently like a combination of those influences and more."

Lushlife, whose work has been lauded by everyone from Pitchfork to the New York Times, is set to perform at the annual Roots Picnic, June 1 at the Festival Pier at Penn's Landing.

Also on board at the Picnic this year are blues guitarist Gary Clark Jr., Macklemore and Ryan Lewis, Beyonce's kid sis Solange, Canadian hip-hop chanteuse Grimes and Naughty by Nature, who will be backed by The Roots.

The Roots have been standing especially tall for Philly music in recent years, thanks largely to their work on NBC's "Late Night with Jimmy Fallon." They're already in Philly for the unveiling of their mural, designed and implemented by Amber Art and Design, at the World Communications Charter School at 512 S. Broad St.

The unveiling is a nice warm-up to Picnic day.

"I'm super honored to have been asked to play [The Roots Picnic]," says Lushlife, who adds that he may be unveiling some new tracks himself during his set. "Black Thought is one of my favorite rappers of all time."

Townsend Wentz has a few tricks up his sleeve

Hot chef. The cook at McCrossen's Tavern gets creative with monthly dinner pairings.

Townsend Wentz serves up sophisticated pub fare at McCrossen's Tavern. / PROVIDED

Chef Townsend Wentz wants to show you some of his secret moves. Wentz, who has been loyal to McCrossen's Tavern in Fairmount for nearly three years, collaborates with sommelier Lauren Harris to create sophisticated yet approachable monthly dinner pairings. But that's only one day a month. We learned what talents Wentz is flexing the rest of the time.

What's in the works for the next monthly pairing?
Our June dinner [on June 6] will be a beer pairing. It's my version of French barbecue. I like to keep it fun and summery. We've been doing the monthly pairings for going on two years now. It's fun because it's an opportunity to step outside what we do on a normal day and offer more of ourselves and our expertise.

So you have degrees in chemistry, biology and psychology?
Well, an associate's in psychology. I didn't learn enough to wield it effectively.

How did you end up as a chef then?
I went to Rutgers and cooked my way through college. I started by washing dishes until I had an opportunity to cook.

What do you think of the recent news about Le Bec Fin closing? Is it an end of an era?
Undoubtedly. Georges Perrier did an unbelievable job. He's been the vanguard of fine dining for, what, 40 years or so? I call that a great run. You're going to trace a lot of work in the city back to that leadership, as far as being the head of the culinary scene. But the dining room and lifestyle of Le Bec Fin is retiring and moving on. The world is different now and the expectations are different. I think in terms of how the kitchen is run, you'll still find that. Kitchens that are run in that French brigade fashion. That's important, that creates chefs. That's the legacy of Le Bec Fin in Philadelphia.

Do you have any summer rituals?
Every summer I take Wednesdays off and I race my sailboat on the Delaware river. Very bourgeois, I know! I used to travel to Key West, racing, when I had more time. My cheese monger, Rocco Rainone [of Di Bruno Bros.] sails with me. It's so much fun.

Hold the gluten, please

Whether you're ditching it for health reasons or just want a taste of the food fad, we found a few restaurants that let you skip the gluten without missing out on your favorite treats. GRACE DICKINSON

Burgers and brews

Of all the reasons to love summer, a cold beer paired with a hot burger is among our favorites. Pub on Passyunk East (P.O.P.E., 1501 E. Passyunk Ave.) has gluten-free options for both, including a burger with fried green tomatoes and basil mayo on a gluten-free Kaiser roll. Wash it down with Dogfish Head's Tweason, a strawberry ale.

Pizza

SliCE owners Marlo and Jason Dilks can cook you up a gluten-free pie, baked in an individual pan to avoid cross-contamination, at either of their Philly locations (1740 Sansom St. and 1180 S. 10th St.).

Dessert

Ditch the regular doughnuts and bite into a creative treat free of refined sugar, dairy and gluten from Sweet Freedom (1424 South St). Try the Thinola, a doughnut version of the Girl Scout's legendary Thin Mint.

Sandwiches

Paesano's owner Peter McAndrews has two kids with celiac disease, so he knows firsthand the challenges of finding a good gluten-free sandwich. Taffets bakery supplies the Italian Market location (1017 S. 9th St.) with gluten-free bread, while Sweet Christine's stocks the Northern Liberties one (152 W. Girard Ave.). Consider filling the space in between the bread with the Paesano classic: brisket, horseradish, mayo, roasted tomatoes, pepperincino, fried egg and sharp provolone.

THE VICTORIA

FREEHOUSE™

Beer Week at The Victoria Freehouse

215.543.6089

10 South Front Street, Philadelphia, PA 19106

Every week is beer week at The Victoria Freehouse with nearly 50 beers to choose from, Freehouse is a force to be reckoned with.

In a city that is crowded with stagnant Irish bars, The Victoria Freehouse is a breath of fresh air. "I don't know of any other bars who offer what we do," suggested Ed Strojan, co-owner of the Old City bar and restaurant. "Our beers are pretty spot on, and they're definitely unique."

Offering traditional British fare, the newly opened establishment is quickly turning heads. And with Philly Beer Week underway, there's no better place to grab one of their many brews. "This first weekend is going to be a big one for us. We've got stuff going on every day. We'll be offering four different beer tastings for $20 on various days. Bar snacks will also be served."

But it doesn't stop there. Strojan is also planning on having dinners, paired with assorted beers, for more than reasonable prices. "Our Grand Beer Dinner on Sunday, June 2nd will definitely be something worth coming in for. After 7pm, we're having a five course dinner, with five 10oz beers, for $40."

With so much to choose from, there's no doubt that this will be the first of many Philly Beer Week celebrations for The Victoria Freehouse. "British people are very particular about their food and beers, and we've got nothing but good feedback."

Check out the recently renovated park and help raise funds for even more renovations, including a proposed "sprayground." The festival will feature tons of kid-friendly activities, including a moon bounce, a magician, a balloon twister, tennis lessons, face painting and live music. Food trucks, including Little Baby's Ice Cream, will be serving up goodies.

PHILLY BEER WEEK

Craft Beer Day

Saturday, 11 a.m.-2 a.m.
East Passyunk Ave.
Pay as you go, 215-336-1455
www.visiteastpassyunk.com
East Passyunk Avenue is kicking off Philly Beer Week in a big way with 15 hours of craft beer events. That's right, 15 hours! Lots of new beers will be on hand for you to try, and several brewers will be there, too. When you get the munchies, we recommend stopping at P.O.P.E.'s table for some grill action, or going to Stateside for a pork belly and beer-braised baked bean happy hour.

Haddon Township Pub Fest

Saturday, 2-7 p.m.
Various bars
Collingswood, Westmont and Haddon Township
www.haddonpubfest.com
Philly isn't the only place celebrating beer week. South Jersey is jumping in on the fun with eight bars participating in the third annual Haddon Township Pub Fest. Each is offering a different craft brew, and a free shuttle service will run between all of the pubs and the Westmont PATCO station. Bonus: Buy a Pub Fest T-shirt and wear it around for special deals and door prizes.

MUSIC

Kelly Rowland

Friday, 9 p.m.
Theatre of Living Arts, 334 South St., $35, 215-922-1011, www.tlaphilly.com
Are you as surprised as us to find out Kelly Rowland has come out with four albums since Destiny's Child said goodbye? Maybe we've been too busy obsessing over Beyonce. Rowland is bringing her Lights Out tour to Philly to promote her latest, "Talk a Good Game." For all you Destiny's Child fans, Mrs. Carter and Michelle Williams make appearances, in the song "You've Changed." The chances of them joining her on stage aren't likely, though.

4th Annual Broads, Brews and Queens

Saturday, 9 p.m.-12 a.m.
Smokin' Betty's
116 S. 11th St.
Pay as you go, 215-922-6500
www.smokinbettys.com
Ladies, this is one beer week event you don't want to miss. Smokin' Betty's is celebrating women in the beer industry with drag queen Goddess Isis pulling double duty as host and performer. Fellow drag queens Sisters in Sin will be there, too. Some of the proceeds will benefit local LGBT community centers, and word on the street is that "beer queens" will be making an appearance. We'll let you guess what that means.

We want you!

EXERCISE

Manayunk Fit Fest

Saturday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m.
Levering Street parking lot
Free, 215-487-9137
www.manayunk.com
Manayunk is celebrating its growing reputation as a healthy 'hood with a day of 30-minute classes, health consultations and Walk the Wall, a hike up the challenging Manayunk Wall (a hill). Fit Fest leads up to the town's Fitness Week, which starts Monday.

SHOPPING

Brooklyn Flea

Sundays, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
The Piazza at Schmidt's
Free
www.brooklynflea.com/philly
New York is making its way to Philly this weekend. The popular Brooklyn Flea, which Travel and Leisure named one of the "world's coolest bazaars," features more than 100 handpicked merchants. Choose furniture from At Home Modern or clothing from Esther Woo Vintage. Plenty of food trucks will be on-site serving delicious creations as you browse. Can't make it this weekend? You'll get several more chances, with the market taking place every Sunday this summer.

FESTIVAL

Italian National Day

Saturday, noon-7 p.m.
East Passyunk Ave.
Between Mifflin and Moore Sts.
Free, 215-336-1455
www.visiteastpassyunk.com
Ever try Italian beer? This is your chance. There will be plenty of food, too, of course, plus live music throughout the day. And another moon bounce, for the kiddies. Mangia!

DANCE

MM2 Modern Dance Company: 'Three'

Sunday, 2 p.m.
Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts
118 N. Broad St.
Free, 215-972-7600
www.mm2dance.org
Come give this company a proper sendoff before they begin their tour in Italy. What makes this group unusual is there are no choreographers: The nine troupe members create routines for their fellow dancers. With each dance less than three minutes long, these performers are under a time constraint, but the execution is breathtaking. Stay after for an art lesson inspired by the theme "Three" to get your cultural fix for the day.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Underestimating your competition is apt to produce undesirable results.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. It's extremely important that you maintain a realistic but positive attitude concerning your work.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Your survival today depends on how well you can function independently of others. Don't operate under the illusion that co-workers are looking out for anyone other than themselves.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It would be wise to support your mate in public, even if you secretly disagree with his or her position..

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Instead of trying to impose your thinking on your co-workers today, first listen to their ideas and/or what they have to say.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Since finances are likely to be a touchy issue, instead of getting involved in a joint endeavor, try to handle all of your funds yourself.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. If you're in a position of authority, be careful of how you treat your subordinates. A situation might get out of hand.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. If you attempt to appease associates rather than follow your judgment, your efforts could turn out to be counterproductive.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Be careful, because you follow an inclination to test your will against a another's. It's juvenile act that you'll regret.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't be intimidated by someone who expresses him or herself in a bold, traumatic fashion.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. It's best not to enter into a joint venture without a clear sense of where it will all lead. Make sure everyone's priorities are in place. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

It's better to err on the side of watchdogs

Re: Stop blaming America first (Metro, May 29) I am an American. As a citizen of a republic, I have a responsibility — not to display a flag pin or a car magnet, but to pay attention to what my government is doing, participate in public discourse and vote accordingly. If I assume something is affected by U.S. policy, but find that it's purely a matter of Bangladeshi managerial incompetence, I've wasted a little time. If I err the other direction, I've neglected my duty. So go ahead and call me a "BAF." That's a label I can wear with pride.
DAN WYLIE-SEARS, VIA E-MAIL

Waste not, complain not

Re: Look twice, shoot once (Metro, May 30) Letter writer Jonathan Perry is off base when he blames Congress for the Washington bridge collapse.

The bridge collapsed when a truck hit supporting structure. Congress did agree in 2009 to massive infrastructure spending, but Obama wasted it on other things.

Now he complains that Republicans won't let him do that again.

Union ready to compete against MLS' elite clubs

MLS. They want to bounce back after scoring three goals in a road loss. They go to Toronto this weekend.

Finding consistency on the offensive and defensive ends is one of the main things stopping the Union from being mentioned among the best in MLS. For now, the Union are just a good, young team.

The club suffered another setback last Saturday despite tying a season-high with three goals. Instead, the Union lost that one, 5-3, in Montreal. They had been coming off a 1-0 shutout over the Chicago Fire.

Manager John Hackworth thinks his team is on the right track, even if the outcomes don't always show it.

"We put a lot into our preparation," said Hackworth. "I think we've been extremely consistent with our play. Sometimes the scores don't reflect that, but I'm proud of the way we're playing and we just have to keep getting better each week. In this league, with the amount of parody that we have, anybody can beat anybody on any given day. And that's the biggest challenge."

The Union (5-5-3) sit in fifth place in the Eastern Conference, but their minus-5 goal differential ranks 14th out of the 19 MLS clubs.

Searching for a bright spot?

Then look at Jack McInerney, who netted his ninth goal last Saturday. He's tied for the MLS lead.

Hackworth: Philly hates NY

The NY Yankees and Manchester City combined forces to make the MLS' 20th team, New York City FC. They will begin league play next season.

Union manager John Hackworth weighed in on the implications.

"I'm personally excited because it's great for our league and It's good for Philadelphia because we hate New York," he said. "It's just adding another rival to our list and they're a very close proximity away, and it's going to further grow the sport."

Tiger Woods likes the challenge Merion poses. / GETTY IMAGES

Woods: Merion will abuse some of world's best

Golf. Don't worry about the shorter holes, because the other ones will make up for them.

The fairways can't get any greener. That means Merion Golf Club can't be any more ready to host the U.S. Open — the first major championship there in 32 years.

The famed Main Line course isn't the only anxious one. Tiger Woods was asked about the challenges the famed East Course might provide for the world's best. While Woods admitted that some holes would play short, he was quick to point out the dangers around every dogleg.

"Merion will do very well for the U.S. Open," Woods told reporters. "It's going to have some holes that [the players] are going to abuse the golf course with, but they're also going to have some holes on the golf course that are going to abuse them."

Remember, the knock on Merion was that it was too short to host a U.S. Open. Those who have played it have dismissed those fears as nonsense.

"It's not one of the golf courses that [is] in the middle road. It's either tough, or they'll birdie the hole," said Woods, who played it for the first time Tuesday.

Phillies happy to see Brown hitting ball with power

MLB. The former top prospect is finally living up to the hype after the two-homer game against Boston.

Charlie Manuel smiles when he mentions Domonic Brown.

During spring training, the Phillies' manager talked about how Brown is listening and has cut down his swing.

"I can see him having a big year," Manuel said in Clearwater. "He looks real good."

Well, Brown is proving Manuel correct. The left fielder's big game propelled the Phillies to a 4-3 win Wednesday over the Red Sox.

Brown has pop. / GETTY IMAGES

Brown blasted two homers, giving him 13 for the season, which is just one dinger behind NL leader Justin Upton.

During Brown's last 11 games, he was hitting .297 with six homers and 12 RBIs, along with 10 extra-base hits.

"I like it when he hits," Manuel said. "I like to leave him alone and let him play."

Brown believes part of the reason he is playing so well is because he doesn't have to look over his shoulder. He's starting no matter what.

"I think that definitely plays a part," Brown said. "If I have a bad game, I don't have to worry about [being] benched."

The Phillies host the Brewers this weekend.

James fined for flopping

LeBron James admitted to using flopping as a strategy. Now he's being disciplined.

James and the Pacers' David West were both fined $5,000 Thursday for flopping on the same play in Indiana's Game 4 victory. James was called for six fouls and a technical in that game. METRO
